NEVADA CITY Engaging George Mathis, squire of Mathis Hall on the Murchie Road, personifies this city's rapidly growing bid for artistic fame.

Mathis at 39 is a seasoned master of many mediums of commercial art as well as a recognized illustrator.

An interesting career has brought this sandy-haired lithographer to this area. Mathis began life in 1909, in Seattle, Washington. His early days were spent in the quaintly named municipalities of Hoquiam, and Hump Tulips, Washington, on the farms of his parents.

Drawing fascinated him as a child and when he entered Washington State College, he majored in art, studying under the famous landscape artist, William T. McDermott. Here Mathis attained the distinction of membership in Delta Phi Delta, national art society.

The young artist found 1931, at the bottom of the Depression hole, a poor time to be a college graduate who had majored in art. However, he put his education to work with typical ingenuity. Soon he and a partner were drawing the nationally syndicated comic strip, "Danger Trails" by Martin Johnson.

This lucrative activity ended with the death in Los Angeles of Johnson, but while in being, was used by 56 newspapers, including the New York Times, Denver Post, and Philadelphia Herald.

In his next activity, he continued close to the arts. He went on the road with a successful marionette show, which climaxed its tour with 60 performances on Treasure Island, competing on even terms with Billy Rose's Aquacade.

Mathis was married, in San Francisco in 1936, to Jean Stewart, an expert in the technique of puppet design and show production. They have one child, Jean.

During the next five years, Mathis was an artist-instructor, at the Art Institute of Oakland, where he taught both commercial and fine arts.

His next position was as art director for Capwell's where, in addition to administrative direction of the art staff, he did much of the creative work himself and learned the ins and outs of art reproduction processes and the mysteries of advertising.

Following this experience he set up his own commercial art agency in San Francisco. One of his major accomplishments during this period was the illustration of four books, with lithographs in the mellow style that gives distinction to his work.

The books, still enjoying a brisk sale, were titled: Carmel, Monterey, San Francisco, and Muir Woods.

In recent years Mathis has specialized in lithography. His reputation as a fine artist and illustrator is chiefly based on his accomplishments with this medium.

He has just completed a splendid series of twelve lithographs of the Gold Country for an Oakland firm and plans, in the immediate future, to expand the series.

Mathis is building his own, 8-room home on his property near the Murchie mine road. There are many pleasing and remarkable features in the construction of the house. One is an open-air fireplace in the center of the living room.

Smoke is drawn off by means of an iron hood suspended from the ceiling. The hood is at present being fabricated by the Miner's Foundry.

The young artist's plans are to continue both his illustrative and commercial art in the studio of his new home here. He likes everything about Nevada City, and in the course of a long stay here, expects to build a large collection of lithographs of the beautiful countryside.

His current lithographs are on display and for sale at Hansen's Paint Store and Tess' Gift Shop and his new drawings of this area will soon be displayed at those shops.

GOLD DIGGER'S TRAIL

Charles Scott Haley

After vainly trying to locate in Rosebud, we walked over to Sawtooth, some dozen miles away. Here also we found all work had ceased, and whereas we paid fifty cents for a meal at Rosbud, we found that the Sawtooth price was seventy-five. Our funds were soon at the vanishing point, and we took stage next morning for what was then known as Circle City, some thirty miles away. This camp was on the line of the Western Pacific Railroad, which was then building. It is now known as the station of Jungo.

We had heard that they needed surveyors and helpers on the line, so we spent our last dollar for stage fare, as the walking was bad. A late snowstorm was sprinkling the air with flakes and a cold wind was blowing as we arrived that afternoon.

It was a typical railroad construction camp of about two hundred bohunks with a sprinkling of contractor foremen—all housed in tents. We walked over to the office and found that while they had no need at all for surveyors, they could use a mule skinner and a couple of swampers. We had a hot and substantial supper, and were sent to the main bunk tent with a pair of populated blankets which were about as thick as a piece of tissue paper. I suspected that they had been using mine for a dishcloth, from its condition.

The big tent was dirt floored and filled with about fifty double deck bunks, some with straw mattresses on them, some without. The latter appeared the cleaner. A big barrel stove was in one end, and most of the men were gathered around it. A few feet away from its circle of heat, the air was as chilly as the snow outside.

My two companions had been farsighted enough to bring their big varsity sweaters with them. I had nothing heavy to keep me warm. They decided to combine their blankets and bunk together, for the sake of mutual warmth. They were worried about me, and told me that I could have one of their blankets. I shook my head, for I had already laid my plan for a warm berth.

A large, fat Italian was holding forth at great length to his fellows and I immediately ingratiated

THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L., SR.

County fairs have changed a little in the past half century. One thing that is different is wearing apparel, especially for women. For the Gay Nineties were also the day of the gay bustle, the tight, much trimmed and beribboned dresses, the high necks and the big hats. Early in the nineties mutton legged sleeves particularly for shirt waists were in vogue. Men wore shoes that had what were called "toothpick" toes. We remember those especially well, because many youths ruined their feet while conforming to fashion. But otherwise, it seems to us men dressed about as they do today, except that a good suit of clothes cost about $20 as compared with $80 today.

Of sourse there were fairs and fairs. Santa Barbara in those times (we are still speaking of the Gay Nineties) had a fine race track and put on, not a horse show but nearly a week of racing, including harness races. About that time bicycles began to be fairly plentiful and there were boy's and men's cycle races at the race track. We recall seeing some of our fleet young men mounted on the high wheels of bicycles coming down the track in the home stretch, pedalling away as if their lives depended on it, sometimes with the little wheel in front of them, sometimes with it trailing, and when they had a spill it really was something to see, almost as disastrous as if they had been thrown from a horse.

There were no riding clubs so far as we can recall, and no horse shows. These are innovations that came in long after the automobile had assumed the leading role in locomotion. Everyone who did not travel in a buggy, surrey or phaeton, traveled on horseback. A lot of people took just as much if not more, interest in their mounts as they do today. But probably there are more ornamental horses today than 50 years ago. A good span of work horses, such as a Clydesdale cross, if well matched, brought anywhere from $350 to $500, which, considering how hard money was to come by in those days compares very favorably with what a Ford would cost now.

When the County Fair came along, every animal entered for exhibition got the grooming of its life. Horses were fed lavish quantities of oats to make their coats shine, cattle were curried and brushed as carefully as horses, sheep were washed so that fleece was snowy white, even pigs were given all-over baths and their bristles combed. Chickens were put to laying tests, just as now, and pigeons, turkeys, ducks, guinea fowl, and peacocks all received the once over, and appeared on opening day with never a misplaced feather.

Farmers showed the best of everything grown; baled hay, wheat in sheaves, oats, barley, and white and yellow corn. Some cereals show a considerable improvement over the displays of 50 years ago, especially corn. We probably owe much of the corn improvement to Henry Wallace. Would that this misguided youth had stuck to his corn hybrids. We are certain this would be a happier world. F. D. R. surely ruined a good farm boy.

Oh, yes. We almost forgot. There was an annual baby show and, just off hand, we suspect it made almost as much money as the races. One day in the week, it seemed as if from nowhere, woen came to town with their babies. There were prizes for fat babies, bright babies, and pretty babies. There were prizes in several classes, prizes for 3 months old babies in three categories of intelligence, health and winsome appearance. Same for six months. and same for a year. Hardly a baby missed getting a prize, and mad, indeed, was the mother who drew a blank. But as we remember it very few drew a blank.

We don't see why the baby shows have been discontinued. It is the best crop any county grows, but apparently they have. But in old days the baby show day was a big day, and a lot of people came to see it. That day always showed a big attendance and brought plenty of money into the fair coffers. To our mind, ruling out the baby show was and is a mistake.

DONNER DOLL WILL GO ON CARAVAN TOUR

SAN FRANCISCO: A tiny doll that survived one of the most tragic episodes in the great emigration westward a century ago, will go on tour throughout the state in the Historical Caravan now being assembled by the California Centennials Commission.

The story of the doll, enshrined at the Sutter's Fort Historical Museum, Sacramento, is the chronicle of the Donner Party that was decimated in 1846 while endeavoring to cross the Sierras into California.

In the covered wagon train of Captain George Donner heading for Sutter's Fort was James Frazier Reed, his wife and four children; among the latter being eight year old Martha Jane "Patty" Reed. The family had departed Springfield, Illinois, in April 1846.

While traversing the desert south of Great Salt Lake, Reed lost almost of his oxen in a stampede and was forced to dispense with one of his wagons. This necessitated disposing of many possesions and limiting themselves to bare essentials.

The more worthwhile and durable items were cached in a hole; lesser objects and perishables were piled onto the ground. The children were told to abandon their toys.

Just before resuming their trek with the wagon train, Patty spied the smallest of her toys, a carved wooden doll, about four inches high, lying on the ground. The child recovered it, and from a discarded piece of white muslin, a strand of pink tape and some black thread, fashioned a little dress for her only toy. Fearing parental disfavor, the girl hid her doll within the lining of her dress.

Calamity befell the Donner Party in October when an early and unusually violent snowstorm trapped the group on the east slope of the Sierra Nevada. Here occurred a time of anguish and travail that later was recounted the world over. There was no adequate shelter; food ran out. Half of the original number of more that 80 emigrants died of hunger and exposure; some while awaiting rescue, the others in trying to break through the mountains.

Throughout the ordeal, Patty had her tiny doll. As each miserable day progressed, she would cherish the small wooden image telling it her childish observations and, seemingly, drawing an indescribable comfort from the undiscovered presence of her little companion.

Fate was merciful to the Reed family, for in the Spring of 1847, they, along with the other survivors, were rescued and taken to their destination.

There was a happy ending to the story of this doll. Her mistress lived for many years in which she saw the dreams of her fellow pioneers come true. Patty was married, became Mrs. Frank Lewis and had children who gathered many an evening in her Santa Cruz home to listen to the story of the emigrant doll. Many historians have recorded this story in their accounts of the ill-fated Donner Party.

Mrs. Lewis died in 1923. It was her wish that "Dolly", as she lovingly called her pioneer companion, be given a permanent home at Sutter's Fort Historical Museum.

Another adventure for the ageless doll will begin soon when she joins other treasured mementos that document the heritage of California in a modern caravan which will tour the state during its centennial observance.

FAIR TO BE BIGGEST, BEST HELD HERE

GRASS VALLEY: Thursday next week, August 26th, ushers in the grand opening of the Nevada County Fair, to be staged in Grass Valley. From official opening time to the final drop of the curtain, on the big event, which will take place at midnight Sunday August 29th, everything points toward this being the biggest and best fair yet to be presented in Nevada County.

Exhibits covering livestock, poultry, rabbits, horticulture, floriculture and agriculture have been filed with the fair association in the competitive field. The viewing of these exhibits in themselves will take a great portion of the day.

Industrial exhibits, covering farm machinery, automotive equipment, home supplies, lumber, home appliances and many other lines will be on the grounds for your inspection.

No expense has been spared to fill to the brim the program of entertainment for visitors. First is the booking of the Pacific United Attractions, one of the leading west coast carnival companies. This big midway will introduce many new rides with of course the "old stand bys", the merry-go-round and the ferris wheel. Some novel side show attractions and concessions.

Booked by the fair association, and to be presented as "free attractions" include such outstanding acts as "The Three Bees", presenting their internationally famous "Puppet Show". The Skating Millers, presenting a thrilling, breath-taking roller skating act, much of which is performed on the top of their car at high speed. Two juvenile dance revues, staged by the Starlet and Aronson Schools of dance will be offered. A free dance nightly, with music supplied by Mel Davis and his nine piece orchestra will be another entertainment feature.

The grandstand attractions are divided between the Horse Show and baseball. On Friday and Saturday the Gold Trail Riders will stage their gala Horse Show. Friday afternoon will be confined to the junior division with Saturday afternoon seeing the senior group performing. In this event you will experience a new thrill. Also in connection with the Horse Show is the giving away of a beautiful, spirited but gentle pony. A draw will be made through the purchase of general admission tickets to the Horse Show. The draw will be made on Saturday afternoon, but will include tickets purchased for the junior event, the preceding day.

Sunday afternoon will be the day for baseball fans. A game has been arranged between the Grass Valley Braves and the Nevada City Merchants.

Grounds are in excellent condition and the building program has been practically completed for this year's big event.

Just Wonderin'

I Wonder, if the communists
Could be transported far away
And all the spies that plague our shores
Eliminated in a day,
And if the Klan would fold its sheets
And put its pillow cases by,
Would our bald eagle feel so light,
He'd rise and flap his wings and fly?

I Wonder at the degree to which we are bothered by nonessentials and the peculiar methods we employ in handling them.

There are, for instance, the communists; early and late we deplore their actions and "spend the taxpayers' money," in abortive efforts designed for their control. Our investigating committees go about asking anxiously of suspects, " are you a communist and have you ever belonged to a communistic organization?" What good does that do? We receive evasive, true or untrue replies, and with those replies we are forced to be content. Meanwhile, the communists hold noisy conventions, quite openly, and thoroughly enjoy their privileges of peaceful assemblage. Why not send a few investigators to these conventions to photograph the personnel and record the names of those who harangue the assembled crowds.

Just now spy rings are causing the waste of much time and money in fruitless research. What is our F .B. I. for? Is it necessary for so many cooks to stir the unholy brew?

The lady spy, who is now telling all, is receiving so much publicity that ere long, she will find it easy to secure a leading part in a Hollywood production, at a good fat salary and utilize her spare time in making radio appearances. In fact, she was scheduled to take part in a radio program just a few days ago and we were deprived of the questionable joy of hearing her, because for some unknown reason, she failed to meet her appointment.

Time was when a self confessed traitor was secluded from public view and summarily dealt with. Sometimes I wonder if we are really growing soft.

Then again, there is the Klan; why does our government tolerate the "Invisible Empire"? Why is the Klan allowed to purchase sheets and pillow slips, with impunity and in quantity, while the American homemaker finds it almost impossible to supply her household needs?

Why is this strange organization permitted to pervert the cross, which for centuries has been the Christian's symbol of love and mercy, by using it as a symbol of unleashed hate and injustice?

We like to think of our United States as a place where liberty is the watchword and where the light of reason shines undimmed, but there are a number of things that need fixing. Sometimes liberty degenerates into license. License to betray the land of one's adoption, license to aid and abet the foes who seek to undermine the citadel of freedom, license to deny to others the rights which we, ourselves enjoy, license to take the law into our own hands and mete out punishments which seldom fit the crime.

I Wonder if it is not time to become a bit more discriminating, to redefine liberty, and to place certain guards and restrictions about our time honored institutions to the end that they may be preserved and handed down intact to future generations.

STATE RANGER SHARP HONORED ON HIS RETIREMENT

NEVADA CITY: On Friday evening, August 13, at 6:30 an outdoor party was held in honor of Ranger W. F. (Bill) Sharp in the Rock Creek area north of Nevada City.

Approximately 70 persons attended the function held in honor of Bill Sharp who is retiring as State Ranger after 26 years of service in Nevada County. The gathering consisted principally of State Forestry employees who have been associated with Bill during his long and active career with the State Division of Forestry. State Forestry employees, in addition to those of Nevada County, came from Yuba County, Placer County, Amador County Calaveras County, North Sacramento District Office ,and the State Forester's office in Sacramento.

After a splendid spaghetti dinner with all the trimmings the group was addressed by Deputy State Forester Fred Dunow. Mr. Dunow recounted the history of the state division from the early days to the present time. State Forester DeWitt Nelson then gave the presentation speech and recalled the early days when Bill Sharp was Ranger in Nevada County. He outlined the tremendous growth that the Division has made in Nevada County under Bill Sharp's administration. Nelson presented Bill with a fine wrist watch given by his many friends at the party.

Nelson said that it is with regret that the State Division of Forestry and Bill's many friends in Nevada County hear of his retirement. However, Bill has served the State and County so well and faithfully for so many years that he deserves a well earned rest. Ranger "Bill" will devote his time to his new place on Alta Hill and will spend considerable time in his garden.

The Division of Forestry personnel have not lost Bill as they expect to see a lot of him quite often as he is so nearby.

Everyone attending the party honoring Bill on his retirement expressed their opinion that it was certainly impressive and enjoyable.

Miss Fay Cooper of San Francisco has been visiting at the home of Mrs. Henry Bernahl.

myself with him. The result was that he invited me to bring my blankets over and share his bunk. We lay back to back after the fire went out, and he was like a human furnace. I was as warm as toast all night, and at the other end of the tent I could hear my heavily sweatered pals coughing and turning, trying to keep one another warm.

At six next morning, we turned out, in the cold frosty morning. Fortunately, it had stopped snowing. But the wind still persisted, and dust was already blowing in the sandy cut. We washed our faces and hands in a tin basin, dipping the precious water from a trough where the mules had just finished their drink.

After breakfast, a big burly Irish foreman came down and called our names. We stepped out.

"Two av yez can help the blacksmith put up his tent and swamp for him today," he ordered. "Wan av yez is needed fer a skinner. Can aither av yez handle a mule—have ye iver seen a mule before, annyhow?"

We looked at one another. I, having led my pals into this, was elected. I stepped forward.

"I was raised on a ranch. Show me your mules."

And then began a day that I was long to remember, and it lasted from seven to seven.

Driving a string of four disgusted mules on a Fresno scraper is no easy job at best, and when the alkali dust is flying so thick that you can hardly see them in front of you, it is even worse.

We were cautioned not to run over grade stakes which determined the depth of cut and height of fill, but by afternoon we could not even tell whether the mules were facing north or south, let alone grade stakes which were practically invisible. Therefore, when the big Irish forman came around bellowing at me like a mad bull and cracked a whip over my head and the mules, I felt my wrath rising steadily. I never have been much good for work when a whip is cracked over me.

That night as I drove my weary mules in, I knew that the job was "deep-enough". The Irishman's whip did it, I think—and when I met my smiling companions, who had taken it easy all day helping the blacksmith, I announced, "We are leaving tomorrow for Lovelock."

"With what," they said. "We're broke, aren't we?"

I walked over to the mule trough and dipped the basin—thick with the grime of half a hundred bohunks—and tried to wash some of the alkali out of my eyes. Then I turned round and told them I had two dollars saved away; we could get along on that, somehow.

My old high school partner, Tip, came to the rescue. "Look what I've got!" And he pulled out a five dollar gold piece that he had cached for emegency. Our other partner, Boots, was then ready for the jump.

And after another night spent in that bohunk tent, they were more than ready to travel themselves. We told our foreman to take the job where he would, and strapping our suitcases on our backs we started the weary forty mile hike down to Humboldt House.

CONSTITUTION: Today, August 19th, is the 136th anniversary of the defeat of the English frigate Guerriere by the Constitution. The attack took place off Cape Race, 1812. After an engagement of only 30 minutes the English vessel was left a total wreck. Captain Hull was the American commander. Affectionately known as "Old Ironsides," the 44-gun frigate is the most famous vessel of United States history. But the government was not interested enough to have her enshrined in a fitting and proper place. She was saved for posterity by the nickels and dimes of American school children.

PRICES. According to current gossip the price of wool is going up. Lumber will be higher. Cotton is down. Perhaps some ingenious person will devise a plan whereby homes can be built with pressed cotton boards, or baled cotton. Waterproofed cotton for tents is out, since the price of cotton yardage remains unchanged. An Australian report on the wool market states: "Consumption in USA mills is still on about the 3,000,000 bale (a year) mark, which is approximately three times the size of the clip now grown." This is good news for the downunder wool growers, but not for the American citizen who will need a new wool topcoat.

CONDOLENCE. The recent death of Archie, the prognosticator, has made us the recipient of sympathetic offers to replace him with other turtles. The pay off came from Capt. F. Kissinger, ship "Pacific Queen", Long Beach Harbor. We received a box marked 'perishable'. On opening it, horrors! Hangovers! etc.! There was a smallish monster! A baby crocodile, or it might be a young alligator. Now we realize how the UN feels when an ugly looking problem is flung into its profound lap.

SNAPSHOT. At an early age he decided to find out what made clocks tick. For 20 years he lived in the story-book Berlin. The longing for wide open spaces was strong. He left for the western continent, then for its west coast. For 40 years he has been a resident of the Northern Mines. He eventually retired and gave away his watchmaker's tools and took to cutting and polishing stones, and to paint and canvas. Under our pines he has found contentment. His kind eyes twinkle from behind gold rimmed glasses. And the air of this little gray-haired gentleman seems to say, "Get thee behind me age!"

OPPORTUNITY. Rusty, the cat, says that if this is your birthday, practically every human endeavor is yours to conquer if you see fit. The stage, the radio and even business. A high degree of success is yours. Go after it!

Our aim is happiness;
'Tis yours, 'tis mine.
Yet few attain it,
If 'twas e'er attained.

Veterans' News

Veteran-students graduating this year and planning to move from the area served by the Veterans Administration Branch Offict to which they have been mailing their National Service Life Insurance premium payments, should notify VA immediately of their new permanent address.

VA pointed out that a veteran's NSLI records are kept in the VA Branch Office supervising the area in which he maintains his permanent address.

The sooner the veteran notifies VA of his change in residence, the sooner VA can transfer his insurance records to the VA Branch Office having jurisdiction over the area in which he will reside.

When advising VA of his new address, the veteran should identify himself fully, indicating his NSLI certificate number, former address and new address. Changes in address may be noted on the space provided for such changes on the flap of the regular VA remittance envelopes.

The average age of World War II women veterans is slightly higher than that of their male fellow-veterans, Veterans Administration said. The feminine average is an even 30 years, while the average age of the men is 29 years and 9½ months.

The number of veterans of all wars reach 18,744,000 on May 1, 1948, Veterans Administration said. Of these, 14,887,000 served in World War II. The remainder were veterans of World War I and other wars.

When the nation's population of veterans and members of their families reaches its expected peak of 60,000,000 in 1955, Veterans Administration predicts that the number of veterans of all wars will be 7,200,000, and the number of persons in their families, 42,900,000.
